SUMMARY

I am a self-taught web designer and developer and digital communications specialist. My diverse personal and professional experiences have taught me to work well both as an individual and as a member of a team. I also have extensive experience working with tight deadlines under intense pressure to perform. I am a friendly, extroverted person and have always had an easy time connecting with people in fast-paced environments. I grew up in Sweden and spent part of my high school years in Kenya. I moved to the United States in 2011 and gained American citizenship in 2016. I am independent and creative, and quickly adapt to new and challenging circumstances to bring value to the organizations I am a part of.
